 NATIONAL MALL CONTEXT

Air & Space Exploration
Smithsonian National Air & Space Museum
 Eisenhower led the effort to create the U.S. Air Force while Chief of Staff of the Army, and he strongly supported aircraft development. He signed legislation and supported development of the Air Force Academy, and he was the driving force in creating the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Transportation
Federal Administration Building
 Eisenhower worked with Congress to create the Interstate Highway System, and he actively promoted airport development with the establishment of the Federal Aviation Administration. He had a personal hand in selecting the site of Washington Dulles International Airport, the first U.S. international airport.

Education
LBJ Department of Education
 Eisenhower was responsible for the first breakthroughs on direct federal aid to education and the National Defense Education Act; he started federal student grant/loan programs, graduate fellowships, and grants to improve public school instruction in mathematics, science, and modern languages.

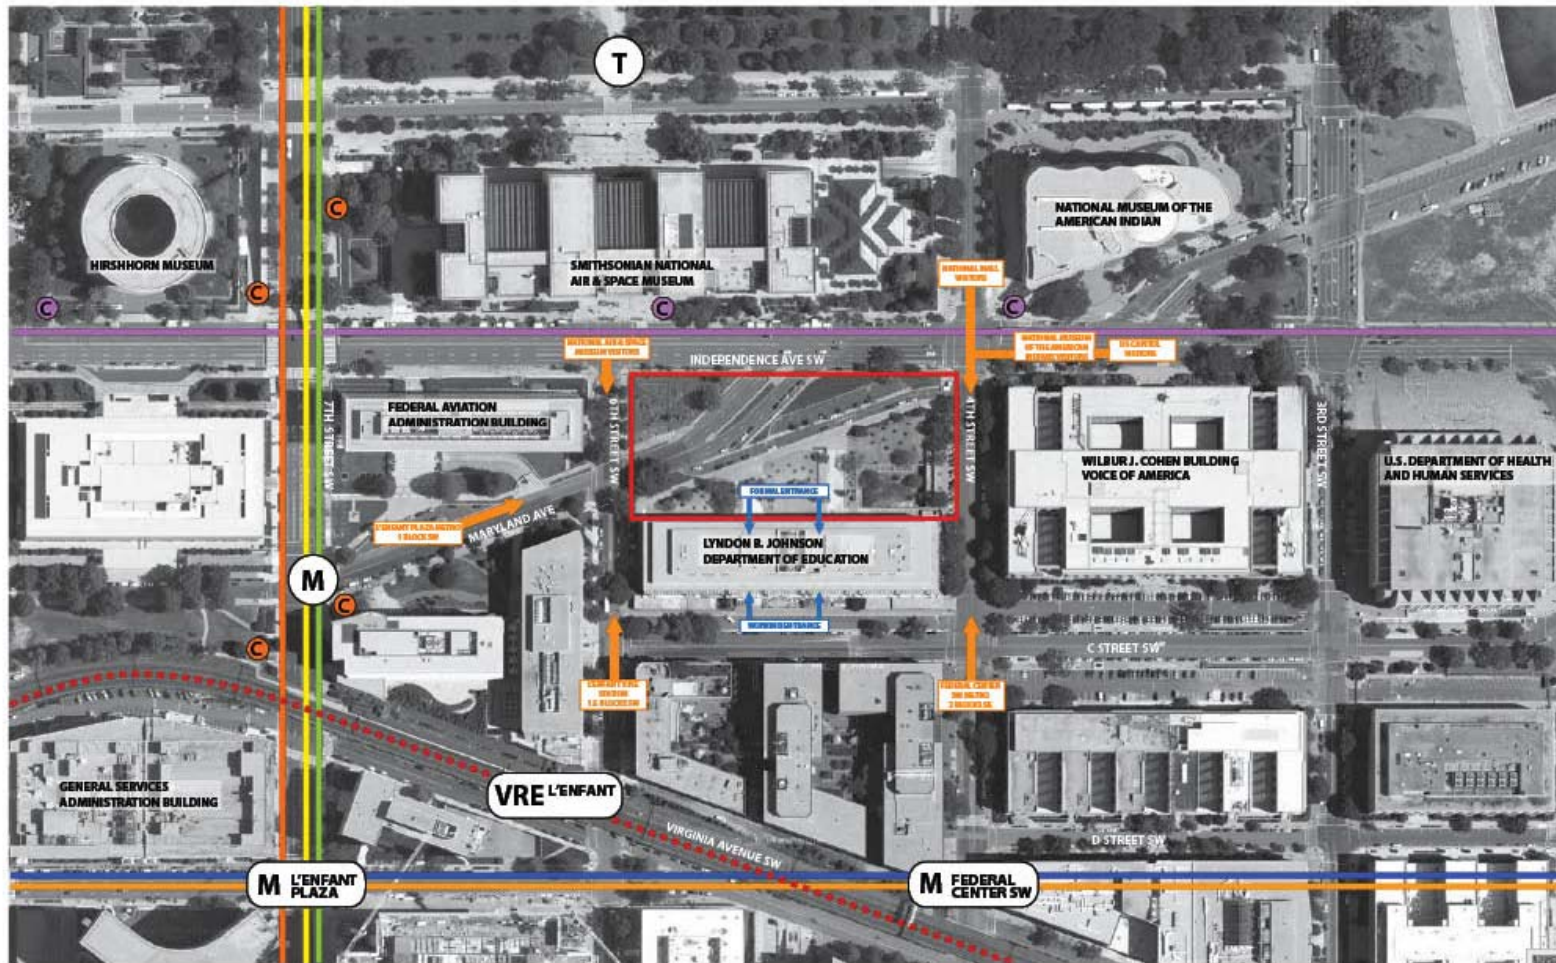

Voice of America
 Eisenhower established the U.S. Information Agency in 1953 with the Voice of America as its principal component.

Department of Health & Human Services
 When the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare (predecessor to HHS) was formed, President Eisenhower appointed Mrs. Oveta Culpa Hobby as its first Secretary. She led the effort to pass Eisenhower's Social Security legislation in 1954, the largest single expansion of Social Security.
